De Blasio rallies mayors around inequality battle

Go big. The mayor said he hopes that U.S. leaders will work for "shared prosperity" across the country.

Mayor Bill de Blasio addressed other city leaders Thursday, asking them to take on a nationwide "inequality crisis."

"There is a long tradition of mayors being ahead of the curve and working for the notion of shared prosperity and working for the notion of people rising together, even when it wasn't in vogue in the national debate," de Blasio said at a U.S. Conference of Mayors meeting in Washington, D.C.

The mayor said that the nation's capital was "gripped in a frustrating paralysis," leaving city leaders to address the causes of inequality across the country themselves.

He also praised the virtues of paid sick leave and universal prekindergarten — two of his signature issues — but said he intends to "look beyond the five boroughs for smart, progressive ideas."

Following the address, de Blasio said he speaks with other leaders on a regular basis, including Mayor Rahm Emanuel, whom he had a private meeting with while in D.C.

De Blasio said he felt other mayors are ready to work together to take on inequality.

"People are feeling this all over the country," he said. "Mayors feel it profoundly because we're close to the ground."

NY Aquarium walrus Mitik moved

Mitik will stay in Texas until renovations are finished. / JULIE MAHER, WILDLIFE CONSERVATION SOCIETY

An orphaned walrus who arrived in Brooklyn in 2012 has moved to Texas while renovations continue at the New York Aquarium.

Mitik, rescued off the coast of Alaska, joined the Coney Island family just weeks before superstorm Sandy hit and damaged the aquarium.

The walrus was moved to SeaWorld San Antonio on Jan. 14, The New York Times reported. He will stay there until the renovation is finished, a project expected to last two years.

Mitik weighed 236 pounds when he first came to Brooklyn. He weighed in at 700 pounds before being shipped out last week, according to the Times.

He suffered from myriad health problems as a young calf, but his health issues were resolved before he left, the aquarium's director said.

New York Aquarium, which is operated by the Wildlife Conservation Society, was closed for seven months following major damage from the storm. It reopened last May, but only half of the exhibits were on view as repairs continued. LAURA SHIN

Bust. Mobster nabbed for 1978 'Goodfellas' JFK Airport heist

Five people said to be part of a New York crime family were arrested on Thursday, including a 78-year-old man accused of participating in a notorious 1978 airport heist that inspired the movie "Goodfellas."

More than three decades after $5 million in cash and $1 million in jewelry was stolen from a Lufthansa airlines building at John F. Kennedy International Airport, the FBI arrested Vincent Asaro, an alleged leader of the Bonanno organized crime family, on robbery charges.

Four other men, who prosecutors said were members of the New York-based gang, were arrested for other crimes.

"Vincent Asaro devoted his adult life to the Bonanno crime family, with a criminal career that spanned decades," said U.S. Attorney Loretta Lynch in a statement. "Neither age nor time dimmed Asaro's ruthless ways, as he continued to order violence to carry out mob business in recent months."

At the time of the JFK caper, the currency was being shipped to a U.S. bank from West Germany and the theft was the biggest cash heist ever in the United States. REUTERS

City guide gives teens social media advice

The city's Department of Education released a social media guide for students. / GETTY IMAGES

Tips. The city rolls out "Student Social Media Guidelines."

"Pause before you post."

That and other recommendations are part of an eight-page social media guide for students 13 and up that recently rolled out by the city's Department of Education.

The "Student Social Media Guidelines" aim to teach teens how to be responsible while communicating online.

"It is important to recognize that access to information can result in tremendous advantages, but it can also create new responsibilities of which students should be aware," the guide begins.

The city advises teens to use social media to establish a positive image and to take responsibility for content they've posted. Cyber bullying, the guide warns, should be taken seriously.

The city also tells students to consider consequences of social media in the classroom.

"Using social media academically is an extension of your classroom environment," the guide says.

Communication

"Part of being a successful citizen is understanding that social media and digital communication are essential parts of our world today."

Teen arrested in multiple robberies, rape attempt

A 15-year-old boy has been charged in a string of recent robberies and a rape attempt that took place in Manhattan, police said.

Kalief Jackson, of Brooklyn, has been charged with attempted rape, sexual abuse and multiple counts of robbery and burglary.

Police said that Jackson approached a 34-year-old victim inside a residential building on East 116th Street early Sunday morning and placed his hand over her mouth.

He stated that he had a firearm and then took her to an isolated part of the building, where he tried to rape her.

The victim was able to break free, and Jackson fled from the area.

Jackson is also accused of at least seven robberies between Jan. 15 and Jan. 19. He reportedly stole cellphones, cash, a Canada Goose coat, a debit card and a MetroCard, police said.

During one of the robberies, Jackson allegedly touched a 28-year-old victim's genitals over her clothing and then forced her to touch his genitals over his clothing, police said.

Police say that Jackson simulated a firearm in some of the robberies. In one incident, the victim reported that Jackson displayed a firearm.

Nine kittens found by NYPD up for adoption

Too cute. The cats were taken from an animal hoarder.

The three-month-old kittens were recently removed from a New York City apartment. / ASPCA

Nine adorable kittens are up for adoption after an NYPD officer found them in a hoarding situation and tipped off the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The officer, who is a sergeant in the 40th Precinct, received a call about an individual with too many cats.

When he arrived on scene, he discovered that the owner had 15 cats in one apartment, including nine kittens.

Though the situation was not illegal, it was "getting unmanageable for that person," said Mallory Kerley, spokesperson for the ASPCA.

The officer referred the case to the ASPCA Cruelty Intervention Advocacy team for help.

"We work with hoarders on helping them manage and, in this case, remove some of the kittens from their home," Kerley explained. "They work with us on a voluntary basis."

She added that the CIA team works with pet owners who are not necessarily guilty of animal cruelty but may be on a path toward negligence.

In honor of the 2014 Winter Olympics, seven of the kittens are named after Olympians. The other two felines are named Wednesday and Violet. The kittens are available for adoption at the ASPCA Adoption Center at 424 E. 92nd St.

Report: NSA telephone data collection is illegal

The board. Their review was based in part on classified briefings and documents.

The U.S. National Security Agency's bulk collection of phone records provides only minimal benefits to countering terrorism, is illegal and should end, a federal privacy watchdog said in a report released on Thursday and reviewed by Reuters.

The watchdog agency's report could further complicate efforts by both President Barack Obama and Congress to come up with possible reforms to NSA eavesdropping

The Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board, which produced the new report, is an independent government agency within the executive branch that advises the President and Congress on how to ensure that counterterrorism operations also protect Americans' privacy.

In its report, the board called on the government to end the NSA program that collects U.S. telephone records in bulk and to purge the data it had collected, adding ammunition to efforts by privacy advocates to win new restrictions on government surveillance programs.

"The Section 215 bulk telephone records program lacks a viable legal foundation under Section 215, implicates constitutional concerns under the First and Fourth Amendments, raises serious threats to privacy and civil liberties as a policy matter, and has shown only limited value," the board said in its report.

In its report released last month, the review panel also raised questions about the value of telephone metadata collection in producing counter terrorism breakthroughs. The panel recommended that metadata collection should continue, but that data should henceforth be stored either by telephone companies or an independent third party. REUTERS

Legal ground

The board's conclusion that NSA's bulk collection of Americans telephone metadata lacks legal grounding goes further than those of both the president and an ad hoc committee he created to review NSA eavesdropping activities.

In a jam. Prosecutors subpoena documents in NJ bridge scandal

The U.S. Attorney's Office in New Jersey has issued subpoenas to Gov. Chris Christie's campaign and the state Republican Party for documents related to George Washington Bridge lane closures, a lawyer for both groups said Thursday.

Federal prosecutors are looking into the incident in September when top Christie aides are believed to have orchestrated huge traffic jams, apparently to settle a political score during the governor's re-election campaign.

The governor, who is widely seen as a top Republican contender for the White House in 2016, has said he had no direct knowledge of the incident, which is also under investigation by a state legislative committee. REUTERS

Firm that vetted Snowden charged with fraud

The Justice Department accused United States Investigations Services, the largest private provider of security checks for the government, of bilking millions of dollars through improper background verifications.

Slow down and try a little tenderness: Pope Francis to digital world

The often superficial high-speed world of digital social media needs an injection of calm, reflection and tenderness if it is to be "a network not of wires but of people," Pope Francis said on Thursday.

Francis, in his message for the Roman Catholic Church's World Communications Day, also said that while Catholics should cherish and defend their ideas and traditions, they should never be so smug as to claim that "they alone are valid or absolute."

POPE FRANCIS

He again denounced the "scandalous gap" between the rich and poor.

Francis said the media and the Internet, which he called "something truly good, a gift from God," could help bring people together, but that digital communications often impeded them from truly getting to know each other. REUTERS

Card scam. Target CFO to testify before Senate on data breach

Target Corp.'s chief financial officer will testify before the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee on Feb. 4 about a massive data breach in what is likely to be the first time the retailer publicly answers questions about the unprecedented attack.

The committee is chaired by Sen. Patrick Leahy, a Vermont Democrat and author of one of the few data security bills under consideration.

Target stores. / GETTY IMAGES

John Mulligan, who is executive vice president as well as chief financial officer, oversees Target's financial portfolio, including finance and retail services, company spokeswoman Molly Snyder said in an email.

Representatives of the Federal Trade Commission, the Secret Service and the Department of Justice are also slated to testify at the hearing, according to the committee's schedule.

Last week, Democratic lawmakers called for a congressional inquiry into the hacking of credit and debit card data of tens of millions of customers of the No. 3 U.S. retailer during holiday shopping.

Privately owned luxury retail chain Neiman Marcus has said it too was victim of a cyber attack. REUTERS

MUSKRAT LOVE LIVES ON

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

CNN=POLITICS

Of all the news rumbling down the pike this week, I hated most hearing that Muskrat Susie and Muskrat Sam are no longer doing the jitterbug. Love kept them together for 39 years, but now Captain and Tennille will no longer be belting out their hits together, cuddling for the crowd or pretending to be part of some obscure navy. To be honest, all of that stage stuff ended years ago, and they're both in their 70s. Still, I hated to hear about their split.

About 2.1 million marriages are formed in the United States annually, according to the Centers for Disease Control. (Insert your joke here about why that agency would be tracking such matters.) People like to claim "50 percent of marriages end in divorce" and while that is a misinterpretation of the math, it is fair to say we act less committed to the institution than we were, oh say, back in the 1950s.

Quoted

Marriage is undeniably used at times to force women into roles that not all women like. Certainly some marriages, kept together out of sheer dogma, have thrust both adults and children into years of hellish unhappiness.

Perhaps with reason. Marriage is undeniably used at times to force women into roles that not all women like. Certainly some marriages, kept together out of sheer dogma, have thrust both adults and children into years of hellish unhappiness. And maybe, as some argue, in our age of increased mobility and longevity the idea of spending a lifetime with just one other person is antiquated.

But a strong marriage can also make for a strong personal economy. One of the chief reasons people sink into poverty is that they are trying to raise a child alone, and that is a hard, expensive job. Having a committed partner can help. I suspect that is also a reason some researchers have found married people live longer and healthier lives.

There is nothing wrong with remaining single, and I'm not favoring one type of marriage over another. Furthermore, I readily admit that most marriages have flaws. I'm just saying marriage, as difficult as it is and as old-fashioned as this may sound, also provides millions of Americans with stability, warmth and reliable jitterbug partners. Not a bad thing, especially when times are hard in Muskrat Land.

Texas man to ask court to remove pregnant wife from life support

A Texas paramedic will ask a Fort Worth court on Friday to remove his pregnant wife from life support, saying the fetus she is forced to carry under state law has become severely damaged in her debilitated body.

Marlise Munoz, has been on life support in a hospital in Fort Worth since Nov. 26 after suffering what her husband, Erick, believes was a pulmonary embolism.

Attorneys for Erick Munoz will ask a Tarrant County court to grant permission to turn off life support. REUTERS

Best Super Bowl ads

The real show. You won't want to miss these commercials.

PLUS

No 1:

The Budweiser Clydesdales

"This choice makes me seem like the sentimental sucker that I am, but this is at the top of my list," claims Wheaton. Why? "This year it's going to have a baby Clydesdale — and a puppy."

Super Bowl XLVIII is shaping up to be most expensive in history, with tickets selling for over $3,000. But that's nothing compared to what advertisers are shelling out for a 30-second commercial — their bill will be in the $4 million range.

That high price tag means companies are looking to get "the most bang for their buck" with their spots, notes Ken Wheaton, managing editor of Advertising Age. "You gotta get people talking even before the game." To build up this critical buzz, expect to see many commercials released before the big game online, where advertisers hope they will be picked up and shared via social media, en masse. Axe Deodorant has already released its commercial, with Toyota, Audi, Volkswagen and Oikos sharing "teasers" or trailers at press time.

Releasing ads online before the big game is strategic for another reason — they can be more creative (and longer). Most people remember the Volkswagen spot from 2011, which featured a child dressed as Darth Vader. Volkswagen was smart and ran a longer version online; by the time that year's Super Bowl came around, millions of people had already seen that version. However, Wheaton notes that too much build-up can backfire. Take Jaguar's high-concept ad this year that revolves around British villains, with teasers running in the playoffs. "It's too convoluted for a Super Bowl ad," he says.

But there are some that Wheaton is excited for:

Baby animals star in Bud's latest ad. What's not to love about that? / PROVIDED

Wheaton's picks

2 Doritos' Crash the Super Bowl contest. Since 2006, Doritos has hosted a contest where consumers make their own ads, with the top two or three getting on air. Wheaton says that one is being viewed around Advertising Age's offices: "The Finger Cleaner." "It's hilarious, but it's so weirdly dirty I don't know if they'll be able to put it on the air." Wheaton notes that the Doritos spots are "cheap laughs" — but they're funny, nonetheless. Plus, "it's good to see what people are capable of creating outside of advertising agencies."

3 Kia. "I just don't know about this one," he says about the car manufacturer. "I never know if they'll be excellent — but they really do pull out all the stops and come out with these crazy ads." Wheaton points to the Kia spot from 2012 that featured Motley Crue, supermodel Adriana Lima and MMA fighter Chuck Liddell. "It was really over-the-top."

4 Coke. "They usually have something sentimental, or sappy or funny," he says. "But Coke always does a great job with a big event like the Super Bowl."

5 Chrysler. It's not yet known whether the company has bought airtime, says Wheaton, who notes this tactic could work in their favor: "People like to have some surprise left. If you see it beforehand, it robs the event of its magic."

The Grammys: Lip-licking good

Music's biggest night. Here is what to be on the lookout for when tuning in on Sunday.

What makes the Grammys are the performances. The programmers know this, which is why in recent years they have featured less trophy presentations and more oddball pairings of performers that you wouldn't necessarily think would work together. The results often vary from stunning to excruciating, which is why we tune in. Here's what to look for on Sunday night.

Getting lucky?

Pharrell Williams had his hand in two of 2013's mega hits, Robin Thicke's "Blurred Lines" and Daft Punk's "Get Lucky," the latter of which he'll perform with everybody's favorite helmeted Frenchmen. With Nile Rodgers and Stevie Wonder also joining in this jam, you can feel it all over, especially as it's rumored they'll go into Wonder's classic "Sir Duke." It will also be surprising if you don't see Williams at the podium to accept an award at least once. He's nominated for seven!

'Radioactive' duet

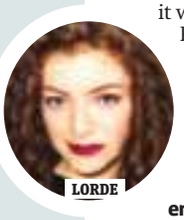
One of the worst moments in Grammy history happened in 2006, when Linkin Park, Jay Z and Paul McCartney tried to create mashups featuring their music. (In 2006, mashups were still new and musicians were still figuring out how to accompany rappers.) Now, hip-hop and rock fit more naturally, so when Imagine Dragons play their Record of the Year nomination, "Radioactive," as Kendrick Lamar raps over it with "Swimming Pool," from his Album of the Year nomination, "Good Kid, M.A.A.D City," it has potential. Interestingly enough, Macklemore and Ryan Lewis (nominated for seven awards, including Album of the Year and Song of the Year) are not paired with anybody.

Editor's picks

Key: Turquoise = What should win
Red = What will win

Record of the Year

"Get Lucky" Daft Punk featuring Pharrell Williams
"Radioactive" Imagine Dragons
"Royals" Lorde
"Locked Out of Heaven" Bruno Mars
"Blurred Lines" Robin Thicke featuring T.I. and Pharrell Williams



LORDE

Album of the Year

"The Blessed Unrest" Sara Bareilles
"Random Access Memories" Daft Punk
"Good Kid, M.A.A.D City" Kendrick Lamar
"The Heist" Macklemore & Ryan Lewis
"Red" Taylor Swift

Song of the Year

"Just Give Me a Reason" Pink featuring Nate Ruess
"Locked Out of Heaven" Bruno Mars
"Roar" Katy Perry
"Royals" Lorde
"Same Love" Macklemore & Ryan Lewis featuring Mary Lambert

Blurred horn lines

You remember Robin Thicke from the VMAs? He was the one guy that Miley Cyrus grinded upon who wasn't dressed like a stuffed animal. Anyway, he's being given another shot at awards-show glory, and he's sharing the stage with the legendary horn outfit Chicago. So he had something different in mind when he told Cyrus right before their duet that he wanted "something horny"?

Big, sloppy end

There's no star in an all-star jam, but Dave Grohl is curating the finale, which includes Nine Inch Nails, Queens of the Stone Age and Lindsey Buckingham of Fleetwood Mac. What makes this different from any Rock and Roll Hall of Fame jam is that we can't think of a single song all of these guys would like. It will be a mess, but at least it will be a fun mess.

Music's last couple

Wouldn't it be sublime if hip-hop's royal couple silently acted out a dramatic scene while Lorde performed her multi-nominated "Royals"? Think about how much that "you can call me Queen Bey" part would resonate! Or maybe Jay Z and Beyonce could do "Love Will Keep Us Together," as a tribute to Captain and Tennille, who announced earlier this week they are divorcing.

LL Cool J is back for his third consecutive year as the host and, if previous years are any indication, he will also swing wildly between cringe-worthy (licking his lips way too much) and awe-inspiring (kicking it old-school at the end of last year's ceremony with Chuck D).

Patton Oswalt finds comedy in tragedy (and other things)

Story rants. The comic's one-hour Epix stand-up special may or may not include a Judy Blume recitation and a fog machine.

Watch the new special "Patton Oswalt: Tragedy Plus Comedy Equals Time" at www.epixhd.com. / GETTY IMAGES

When Epix dropped the ball on airing Patton Oswalt's new one-hour comedy special, "Patton Oswalt: Tragedy Plus Comedy Equals Time," on its scheduled premiere, Jan. 16 (they ended up airing it the following night), he went on a very Patton Oswalt-esque Twitter rant. First tweeting, "Uh, yeah... sorry guys. @EpixHD f—ed up. My special airs TOMORROW night, 10pm EST. NOT tonight. Watch @parksandrecnbc instead." (Oswalt is a big fan of "Parks and Recreation.")

Being the stand-up (get it?) guy he is, however, Oswalt didn't want to let down the fans. He went on to tweet a "version" of the special — recorded last July at Spreckels Theatre in San Diego — that included a full recitation of the third chapter of Judy Blume's "Wifey" and an impression of Rhea Perlman "doing Jules' speech from the end of 'Pulp Fiction' with a fog machine." (Note: Neither of those things are in the actual special. We sort of wish they were.) We caught up with Oswalt to talk about his stint on "Parks and Recreation," his deep nerdiness, embracing a bad stand-up experience and more.

Can you recall a moment from your early days when you totally bombed?
I have so many moments where I've bombed that they've kind of blended into this giant amorphous non-memory. But what I remember even more than the bombing is the day after the bombing, where you wake up and the world didn't end. Once you embrace that, you're free.

How long would you say it took you to embrace that?
Oh God, like, six, seven years. My ego held onto thinking that it was the center of the universe way longer than it should have.

I told my friend, a fan, I was going to talk to you. He described your style of stand-up as "story ranting." Thoughts?
Story ranting. Wow. That's a very good description of what I do. Tell your friend thank you. I might actually use that. I'm serious.

You tend to play really nerdy characters — what's the nerdiest thing that you're willing to admit about yourself?
I can recite movies like "Jaws" and "Blade Runner" from beginning to end. Literally recite them. That's a level of nerdiness that other nerds look down on.

ALEXANDRA CAVALLO

Prime time

Would you want to make the movie you described in your "Star Wars" filibuster from "Parks and Rec"?
Jeez, if I had the time and money and resources, and was able to call on the people that I needed to do that, of course I would. If I was some insane billionaire, sure I would.

You could start a Kickstarter.
"I need $5 billion."

How long did it take to get that scene down?
It was one take. That whole scene, you saw it all, it was all off the top of my head.

Is that how your mind usually works?
No, it was racing, because I really love "Parks and Rec" and really didn't want to do a bad job. They told me I only had to speak for 30 seconds, but they never yelled cut, to mess with me. ... That's pure terror that you are looking at.

The cruise

Christophe Paou and Pierre Deladonchamps get close in "Stranger by the Lake." / STRAND RELEASING

Sex picture. A pick-up site gets hit by a murderer in the nudity-drenched "Stranger by the Lake."

Unlike their female counterparts, gay men in movies can be personalized but rarely sexualized. It's a safe bet that the French film "Stranger by the Lake" features more man-on-man action — and, for that matter, more unclad male members — than nearly any film outside of pornography. And yet it's garnered a fraction of the crossover buzz of "Blue is the Warmest Color," despite being a superior sex and relationship movie.

The setting is a cut-off rural lakeside that has become a hopping cruising site, patronized by our strapping, youngish hero Franck (Pierre Deladonchamps). Despite the specific setting and subject matter, Franck could be anyone fumbling through any dating scene, especially because he does, in fact, want love. After several false starts and dead ends, he thinks he finds it in Michel (Christophe Paou), whose Tom Selleck mustache summons up a bygone era. Thing is, Franck one night witnessed Michel drowning his former boy toy, a development that doesn't stop Franck from carrying on a fling.

The first half is content to hang out and observe, with deadpan glee, the sometimes amusing inner workings of this microcosm. The second is eaten up by an investigation into the death. Here, the film becomes glaringly metaphorical, using a horror/thriller plot to get at something deeper.

This isn't the first film to explore the connections between desire and danger. But "Stranger by the Lake" is also about something more specific. Michel's secret homicidal leanings, along with his general sense of mystery, stand in for the fear that comes during early relationships with getting to know someone. Franck lusts after Michel, but he's both drawn to and afraid of taking their love to a more serious level. Michel's murderous streak could be replaced by a weird kink or a moderately irksome psychological defect — something that keeps us from wholeheartedly embracing and giving one's life to another.

Art film. Godfrey Reggio's latest is maddeningly simple — or is it?

What is "Visitors"? For starters it's a film by Godfrey Reggio, who made the 1984 maximalist mainstream art film "Koyaanisqatsi" — the one with fast-forwarded images of urban life set to a crazy-making Philip Glass score. It's 74 shots, each in crisp, digital black-and-white. Most show people looking back at you. Occasionally Reggio throws in something else: a gorilla; a decaying, depopulated building; the moon.

Is it a trance film? Yes and no. We could turn our brains off. But any two images cut together create meaning. And so we, the viewers, are forced, when an edit comes up, to infer that a message is being conveyed. But unlike with the tut-tutty "Koyaanisqatsi," meaning isn't clear. Yet there are suggestions of ideas — just ones that aren't, intentionally, developed. "Visitors" is that rare film: soothing yet maddening.

‘Bridges’ to Broadway

“The Bridges of Madison County” opens Feb. 20. / JOAN MARCUS

Theater. We spoke to four forces from this new musical.

“The Bridges of Madison County” started as a novel by Robert James Waller, but many know it from the 1995 movie starring Clint Eastwood and Meryl Streep. Now it’s back again — as a new musical on Broadway. We had the stars tell us more about it.

Steven Pasquale

(“Rescue Me”) as Robert Kincaid:

“[My character] travels the world alone, taking pictures, living very much the life of a gypsy artist. And he finds, in Francesca, the first-ever feeling of true connection with another person, and it’s the single most powerful thing that ever happens to him. We tell our story from present-day Iowa in 1965, and we also tell the story through Robert’s memory, so you learn about characters like Marian, his ex-wife. And we learn things through Francesca’s memory, so we travel to Italy and we learn about her big sister and we learn about her life as a child. So it’s really told on three different planes — but at its heart and core, of course, it’s a love story.”

Kelli O’Hara

(“The Light in the Piazza”) as Francesca Johnson:

“I loved the book when I was a teenager. I thought it was very romantic and sad, and I cried. I believed in her choice in the moment that she was in, and I still do. I think it’s very important to realize that we’re all human, and that when those things happen it’s what you do with them [that matters]. ... The show is for people who live in small towns or don’t feel they can be who they want to be. I come from one of those places. [It’s for] people who think they have to live by a certain set of rules to come and see that everybody wants and everybody aches. You do with that what you will so that you don’t feel alone.”

Jason Robert Brown

(“The Last Five Years”) Music and lyrics:

“Immediately we set ‘Bridges of Madison County’ up as a romance. We wanted very much to write a mature show, something for grown-ups. ... All of us are very conscious that sometimes if you want to do a big Broadway musical, it’s best to do something sort of juvenile — but we didn’t want to do that.”

Bartlett Sher

(“South Pacific”) Director:

“I think what I’m attracted to in the story is that its structure is really good for theater. It has a good secret in it: ‘What if?’ ... It asks so many questions: Am I living as fully as I should?”

Blood 'Brothers.' Damien Jurado is still chasing his dream

Singer/songwriter Damien Jurado says he and collaborator Richard Swift have "completed the circle." / REDFERNS VIA GETTY IMAGES

In his 17-year career of delivering tender transmissions of the heavy-hearted, Damien Jurado has become known as one of the great somber songsmiths of his generation.

Recently, however, Jurado has changed his tune. After a life-changing dream about a man who disappears, never to return, Jurado's sound and vision have evolved into a beautiful two-part psychedelic and cinematic soundtrack to his own soul-searching. On "Brothers and Sisters of the Eternal Son," released this week, Jurado returned to the studio with singer/songwriter and producer Richard Swift for a proper sequel to 2012's "Maraqopa," the album that first references that dream.

"After I made 'Saint Bartlett,' [in 2010] my life just went to hell in a handbasket," Jurado confesses. "I wasn't leaving the house. I got mentally sick. I had a few nervous breakdowns. It was a really bad scene, man. And then I had this dream and my life sort of changed after that."

With a sound both ethereal and triumphant, "Brothers and Sisters" is as dark as it is dreamy. Lush and layered vocals culminate in falsettos that seem to soar to the heavens as the patter of drums and celestial shimmer of keys lead to a newfound towering sound. With his lyrics masked in metaphor and laden with religious allusions, Jurado is no longer carrying the emotional weight of his characters, but helping them find transcendence. This is no longer a trip through the terrain of traditional Americana, but instead a path toward salvation.

"I've completed the circle now," says Jurado. "Up until now I made records that I thought would please critics. That's a very hard thing to admit. I'm not a conformist by any means and I really hate bulls—. I was trying to please fans that wanted songs like 'Ohio' and 'Sheets.' I think those are great, solid songs, and I'm glad that people like those songs, but those songs aren't me. Richard called me out on it. ... He made me throw down my guitar and say, 'Screw this; I'm going to be exactly what I was created to be but spent years denying.'"

Revelation at last

Jurado live is just a guy with a guitar, which he is OK with, but this wasn't always so: "I grew up going to see Iron Maiden. ... When I go to a show I wanna see s— blown up onstage! ... Some people just want to see a guy with a guitar and listen to his stories in song. And frankly that's what I do. And I came to this realization the other night."

JUSTIN BIEBER ARRESTED

The Miami Police department used Twitter to release what is probably the first of many Bieber mug shots. "@justinbieber #MUGSHOT," @MiamiBeachPD wrote.

There's been a reckoning coming for Justin Bieber for a while now. It may have finally caught up with him.

The pop star was arrested Thursday morning in Miami Beach for driving under the influence and drag racing, according to Detective Vivian Hernandez with the Miami Beach Police — apparently the young pop star failed a field sobriety test after he was pulled over. He was also driving on an expired license and resisted arrest, according to TMZ.

Apparently, Bieber's entourage had blocked off Miami streets with their cars so that Bieber could have the road to himself for a drag strip. "Kid needs help," police spokesman Bobby Hernandez told the Miami New Times.

TMZ says the police report indicates Bieber "reeked" of alcohol, had bloodshot eyes and appeared to be in a "stupor."

Bieber was very belligerent with the police who stopped him, saying, "Why the f— are you doing this?" He also yelled, "What the f— did I do? Why did you stop me?"

When cops patted him down, Bieber reportedly yelled, "I ain't got no f— ing weapons, why do you have to search me? What the f— is this about?"

Welp, glad to see he's growing up well.

Mug shot musings

The Metro staff shares some feelings on the mug shot:

- "This gal will be HBIC at the Miami Women's Penitentiary within 10 minutes."
- "Are those pimples? Somewhere the brand manager from Proactiv is cringing."
- "It's been so long since we've seen him in a shirt."
- "Good thing he has that giant Jesus tat on his leg to keep him on the straight and narrow."

#FREEBIEBER

Beliebers pledge undying support:

- @kidrauhlfckz: if you cover his mouth on that pic you can see the pain in his eye
- @kidrauhlarena: after i saw that pic with his eyes i felt like someone stabbed me right in my heart, i love him too much to see him in pain
- @paulassss I don't believe all of these Justin Bieber rumours...last night he was skating...not drinking, driving or doing drugs!

Shia LaBeouf: Performance artist

SHIA LABEOUF
GETTY IMAGES

In case anyone was curious, Shia LaBeouf's plagiarism drama — and the cavalcade of attempted online apologies that followed — was just "meta-modernist performance art," the actor explained in a pair of lengthy — and quickly deleted — online postings. "All art is either plagiarism or revolution," he wrote. "My use of Twitter started a broad cultural discussion that needs to be had about plagiarism in the digital age and celebrity/social media absurdity. Intentionally oscillating between hope and doubt, sincerity and irony, knowingness and naivety, construction and deconstruction. I addressed the world." Got it.

Get off that high Schwinn

Re: 'Cyclists are the most selfless humans' (Metro, Jan. 23) The angry, uneducated rant putting entertainingly misguided insults on "selfish people ... too lazy to bike" called to raise the cost of public transport and, in turn, fares for many — some of whom are incapable of riding bikes or commuting many miles in varying weather. Get off that high horse (or Schwinn); after all, you wouldn't have your beloved bikes without our "machines of laziness" to manufacture, deliver, sell and repair them. You, sir, may not be lawless, but you are clueless.

The staff of office

Re: 'Jersey justice' (Metro, Jan. 23) There are staff — and staff. When you manage McDonald's or Dunkin' Donuts, you cannot monitor how every member of your staff is dealing with customers or what he is pouring in a cup. The office of an elected governor is not a store. "Laissez-faire" is a style of leadership; but is it good for someone who want to go to the White House? Do you think that the lieutenant governor is also an uncontrollable member of staff?

All-Star starters

Anthony named starting All Star

The Knicks may be struggling through one of their most underachieving seasons ever, but that didn't stop one member from earning a prominent achievement. Voting for the 2014 NBA All-Star Game was announced Thursday night, and Knicks forward Carmelo Anthony will start for the Eastern Conference. It's his seventh All-Star Game, sixth start and fifth in a row.

Let there be ice: Devils, Rangers visit Stadium

NHL. The Stadium Series comes to the Bronx this weekend, with all three local teams to take the ice.

In his 20th season with the New Jersey Devils, there is not much left for Martin Brodeur to accomplish.

The Hall of Famer in waiting is merely the NHL's all-time leader in games played, minutes played, saves, wins and shutouts. And then there is the matter of the three Stanley Cups he was the Devils' backstop.

The Montreal native has experienced a great deal in his career. But on Sunday he will do something he has never had the opportunity to do as a professional: He will play in his first outdoors game.

"I've never done it and I don't know what to expect," Brodeur said.

The Devils will host the Rangers Sunday afternoon in the first of two Stadium Series games this week at Yankee Stadium.

The Stadium Series games mark the first time the NHL has selected the Devils and Islanders to participate in an outdoor game. The Rangers played in the Jan. 2, 2012, Winter Classic game in Philadelphia, where they beat the Flyers 3-2.

"The whole thing was kind of awesome," Brian Boyle said. "'HBO [24/7]' was a blast. Keeping up with the series, watching the TV shows, that was fun. It was a beautiful day out, everyone was there see it. [It was] something new that I've never experienced before. It was awesome."

The teams will have practices at Yankee Stadium in order to get accustomed to the rink and conditions. Both the Devils and Rangers will skate Saturday, while the Islanders will skate Tuesday.

"That's why for me and [Cory Schneider] the practice [Saturday afternoon] will be really important for us just to get used to everything," Brodeur said, specifically noting the weather and lighting as key factors.

According to weather reports, it is expected to be 22 degrees and partly cloudy on Sunday, which should limit the glare from the sunlight reflecting off the ice.

Islanders players also excited to get their chance

The Rangers and Devils start the festivities on Sunday, but the Islanders will also get on the Yankee Stadium ice.

"Being outside, under the stars, under the lights at Yankee Stadium, that kind of venue with this rivalry it makes it a great event and a great opportunity for a great game," Islanders captain John Tavares said. "[I'm] looking forward to all those many things that come about it."

Players on all three teams seem to be excited to take part in the first NHL game at Yankee Stadium.

"Just to be part of it is going to be fun," Brodeur said. "It's probably the last chance I have to play in one of those, so I'll definitely enjoy it regardless of what happens. My family will be there and we'll take it in stride and enjoy the moment. It's a big game but I think I'm going to enjoy every moment of it, regardless." DENIS GORMAN

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1

Ducks (37-10-5)

The most impressive streak in the NHL this season came to an end Tuesday as the Jets beat the Ducks, 3-2, at the Honda Center, handing Anaheim its first loss in regulation at home (20-1-2). The Ducks are sure to get over it and, if anything, not having to talk about it is probably a good thing moving forward.

No. 2

Blackhawks (32-8-12)

Chicago won its first Stanley Cup rematch with Boston in a shootout. Corey Crawford was the third star of the week in the NHL.

No. 3

Blues (33-11-5)

The Blues have slowed down a little bit but they are still only four points back of Chicago with two games in hand.

No. 4

Penguins (35-13-2)

Speaking of unexpected results, the Penguins fell to the Panthers Monday, snapping a 13-game home win streak.

No. 5

Sharks (32-12-6)

Very quietly, the Sharks are putting together another great regular season and they are in good position for home-ice advantage.

No. 6

Avalanche (31-13-5)

The Avs are coming off one of their worst games of the season, a 5-2 loss to Toronto on Tuesday. Colorado is 7-2-1 in its last 10.

No. 7

Bruins (31-15-3)

Boston is enjoying its final extended rest between games before the Olympics. They are in Philadelphia on Saturday.

No. 8

Lightning (29-16-5)

With Detroit goaltender Jimmy Howard's knee injury, Tampa Bay goaltender Ben Bishop should leave his phone on until Feb. 11.

No. 9

Kings (29-16-6)

LA lost its last two games and is 4-4-2 in its last 10. Things won't get any easier as the Kings play two this week vs. Anaheim.

No. 10

Canucks (26-16-9)

Henrik Sedin's ironman streak (679 games) is over as he missed Tuesday night's game in Edmonton (2-1 Canucks win).

No. 11

Canadiens (27-18-5)

Montreal has treaded water lately, going 4-4-2 in its last 10 games. They have only scored 126 goals and their goal differential is a meager minus-6.

No. 12

Leafs (27-20-5)

Don't look now but the Maple Leafs are playing like one of the hottest teams in the NHL with six straight wins.

No. 13

Wild (27-20-5)

Throwing out a no-show in Dallas on Tuesday (a 4-0 loss), the Wild are playing well (7-3-0 in their last 10 games).

No. 14

Rangers (27-22-3)

Madison Square Garden is called the "World's Most Famous Arena," but don't tell that to the Rangers, who are 12-12-3 there, but 15-10-0 on the road.

No. 15

Flyers (25-20-6)

Steve Mason (19-11-5, 2.56 GAA and .915 save percentage) signed a three-year extension over the weekend.
